Introduction to Wines of Greece

The Wines of Greece only sprang onto the global wine scene in the past thirty years even though Greece has one of the world's longest wine-making traditions. Dynamic wineries, rediscovered grape varieties and a great diversity of available terroirs are driving an impressive change, with a formerly traditional agricultural sector being recast as a cutting-edge player in today's wine world. As a result, Greece's vineyards nowadays offer a large number of outstanding wines sourced from an amazing arsenal of mostly indigenous grape varieties that are distinctive and unconventional in character. The new generation of Greek producers is eager to exploit the untapped possibilities of these grape varieties and take a closer look at the vineyards, bringing forward the discussion of terroir.

Greek winemakers manage to combine tradition and innovation in a spectacular way and are resolved to strengthen the character of their vineyards and grape varieties and make their mark by producing products that clearly speak of their origin. Echoing the diverse topography of a nation like Greece, that contrasts the imposing mountains of mainland Greece with the seaside or inland vineyards of the sun-drenched islands, the wine scene has a gloriously varied mix of styles. And the Wines of Greece celebrate that diversity.

So, even though the Wines of Greece are produced in small quantities by global standards, they offer something totally unique to the world of wine. They are unwavering expressions of their distinctive and ancient places of origin and provide an exciting and exceptional option for those willing to explore beyond the commonplace. Selecting a bottle of the Wines of Greece is an act that advocates vinodiversity, nurturing an exciting, "pluralistic", multicultural global vineyard rather than leaning towards worldwide homogeneity. Wines of Greece consist a unique proposition in the world of wine and today's tasting is just that: A celebration of Greece's heritage, diversity, tradition, innovation, uniqueness and excellent value. Thank you for joining!

WHITE/PINK SKINNED

Aidani
Aromatic, elegant and floral wines bursting with fresh acidity and a round texture. Used mainly in Santorini in blends to round off and soften the austere, crisp and sometimes high-alcohol Assyrtiko.

Assyrtiko
Broad on the palate, with a fresh and steely acidity and high levels of alcohol. Distinctive citrus fruits, loads of minerality (sea-salt and wet stones) and a lovely complex honeyed character developed with bottle-ageing.

Athiri
Fresh, elegant, fruity wines with moderate to high alcohol, medium-bodied and soft acidity. Adds suppleness and softness to the more angular Assyrtiko in Santorini, but excellent varietal examples can be found in other parts of the Aegean Sea.

Debina
Lemony and green-fruit aromas with fresh acidity, light body and low to moderate alcohol levels that reflect the high-altitude terroir in Epirus region, where it grows. Fine and elegant, almost ethereal, Debina can be still and dry or sparkling and semi-sparkling.

Kidonitsa
Bearing the Greek name for “quince”, the rising Kydonitsa grape variety bears lovely quince notes, ripe stone fruit aromas and underlying mineral notes. On the palate it is soft, juicy and enveloping.

Malagousia
Lovely extrovert aromatics reminiscent of grapes, ripe peaches and apricots, tropical fruits and a floral dimension, coupled with hints of freshly-cut herbs, such as mint. Intense, plush and creamy, with moderate acidity and relatively high-alcohol levels and extract. Oaked versions can be rich and complex.

Moschofilero

Pink-skinned grape variety with intense floral character, mostly reminiscent of rose petals, and lovely citrusy and green-fruit aromas. Crisp, with fresh acidity on the palate, it is intensely fresh, with a light body and low to moderate alcohol levels.

Robola

Aromatic and fresh wines with delicate citrus aromas, fennel, vegetal notes and minerality. The palate is balanced with lemony acidity and medium body and displays a lovely depth of fruit and added mineral-earthy complexity, the latter with ageing in the bottle.

Roditis

Pink-skinned grape variety with fruity notes reminiscent of lemon, melon and honey. The palate is crisp, complex and mineral-driven especially when grapes are sourced from high-altitude vineyards. Lovely energy and focus.

Savatiano

Moderate intensity fruity aromas, reminiscent of apple and tropical notes and lovely evolution into honey, nuts and toast with bottle ageing. Medium-bodied, with moderate yet balanced acidity and depth, especially when grapes are sourced from old vines.

Vidiano

Fragrant with ripe fruit and floral elements on the nose as well as some mineral hints. Broad palate, with creamy texture, excellent fruit concentration with fine, balancing acidity levels and hints of minerality. Great affinity with oak.

White Muscat

A superior member of the Muscat family, the white Muscat bursts with explosive aromas of ripe fruits, floral notes reminiscent of roses, grapey character and levels of sophistication. When aged for sweet versions, the wines display a wonderful balance of spiciness and varietal character.

WHITE/PINK SKINNED

Agiorgitiko
Medium to deep ruby color, dense ripe red-fruit character and sweet spices lead towards a soft almost velvety palate, with finely-textured tannins, medium-to full body and medium-high alcohol. Handles oak very well, however some fresh, fruit-forward and crunchy unoaked easy-drinking wines are also made.

Limnio
An ancient grape variety referred to in historical texts, Limnio's seductive character is associated with elegant small-berried fruit aromas and fresh herbs coming across with clarity and intensity. Charming on the palate, fine and elegant, with moderate tannins and relatively high alcohol levels.

Limniona
A rising "star", yet still with minor plantings across Greece, Limniona displays lovely purity of red-fruits, alongside peppery elements and fine herbal undertones. The palate is elegant with fine tannins and great drinkability. Stylistically, this grape is the definition of elegance and charming character.

Mavrodaphni(e)
Associated with a pale tawny-red sweet fortified wine, the Mavrodaphne grape is now being explored from a different angle and is increasingly vinified as a red dry wine. Dense aromas of black fruits and intense herbal notes on the nose, lead to a finely structured, moderately-tannic palate, with excellent fruit concentration.

Mavrotragano
Deep-colored, with depth of fruit, ripe but not overripe aromas and a rich powerful palate with well-built tannic frame and moderate to high acidity levels. Mavrotragano is for the long-term, displaying richness and excellent structure.

Xinomavro
Pale-colored, with tannins that need time in the bottle to soften their edges, and amazing levels of elegance, energy and freshness on the palate. One of the most age-worthy Greek grape varieties developing a complex idiosyncratic "bouquet" reminiscent of red fruits, vegetal notes and mushroom earthiness.

WINE REGIONS

EPIRUS In the northwestern tip of the country, is a cool-climate winegrowing region and its vineyards are extremely mountainous, fragmented and difficult to cultivate. It boasts a diverse range of wines made from unique, indigenous grape varieties that are planted in some of the highest vineyards in Greece. As far as wine style is concerned, the wines, share the same hallmark characteristics and are the ultimate essence of cool-climate viticulture.

MACEDONIA The administrative region of Macedonia is an area of great diversity both in terms of landscape and weather conditions. Macedonia is the land of the Xinomavro grape and is also described as both a bastion of tradition and a place of innovation. Renown Greek PDOs such as PDO Naoussa and PDO Amyndeon, dedicated to the Xinomavro grape, are based in Macedonia, yet undoubtedly, Macedonia is an inexhaustible source of great wines from a number of indigenous and international grape varieties made in different styles.

IONIAN ISLANDS The Ionian Islands form the western border of Greece just below the Adriatic Sea. The seven Ionian Islands are quite mountainous, very steep in places, with a more aggressive topography than the islands of the Aegean. All these result in a diversity of terroirs and wine styles. The vast range of wines, however, is not just due to the fragmented terroir, but also to the large number of varieties cultivated. Some of them are very rare and almost exclusive to this area. Kefalonia is the leading pioneer of the Ionian Islands, producing the greatest and most celebrated wines.

PELOPONNESE The Peloponnese peninsula occupies the southernmost part of mainland Greece and is the nation's largest vineyard. The wealth of distinctive native and international grapes, in conjunction with the wide diversity of available terroirs, has given rise to an astonishing range of wines. Although the climate of the Peloponnese can be broadly described as Mediterranean, the varied topography generates different weather patterns. Large mountains alternate with coastal areas and breathtaking vineyards can be found at altitudes exceeding 1,000 m above sea-level. All these result in one of the most diverse and complex wine-growing departments of Greece. There are more than 30 indigenous varieties grown in Peloponnese.

THRACE The geographical department of Thrace is located in the north-eastern edge of Greece. In terms of vineyard size, this is a small viticultural area and one of the most remote regions of Greece. Thrace enjoys a relatively mild Mediterranean climate, however due to latitude it is considerably cooler than other Greek wine regions. Despite its long-standing tradition in winemaking, Thrace has only recently emerged in the market as a dynamic producer of high-quality wines.

CENTRAL GREECE Is a large and diverse department. It is also one of the most mountainous areas, including part of the Pindos Mountain Range. Topography and soils are complex and diverse, providing an astonishing variety of available terroirs. The "king" in the vineyards is Savatiano, however a large number of other indigenous and international varieties are successfully grown within the department's boundaries. It is also an excellent "center of production" for international grapes such as Syrah, Cabernet Sauvignon, Merlot, Chardonnay, Sauvignon Blanc et al.

AEGEAN ISLANDS The Aegean archipelago, with its countless islands, is the home of many grand terroirs, unique grape varieties and distinctive wine styles. The volcanic island of Santorini lies in the heart of the Aegean Sea. Born of major volcanic eruptions throughout its history, it is difficult to put into words Santorini's breathtaking beauty. Since the prehistoric era, the island has had a long tradition in winemaking, which is evident nowadays from the old, ungrafted, basket-trained vines of Assyrtiko and other grape varieties, sitting in many cases on 200-year-old roots. Due to the sandy volcanic soils, Santorini is a phylloxera-free island, a fact that allows the Santorini vineyard to be considered as one of the oldest in the world. Muscat produces some wonderful dry and sweet wines, most notably on the islands of Samos in North Aegean Sea.
